

The Fourth of July in Thailand

This article is from the "Edifying the Body" section of the Church of God Big Sandy's Web site, churchofgodbigandy.com. It was posted for the weekend of July 4-5, 2009.

By Nathan Kimmons

CHIANG MAI, Thailand—Sawadee khrup from Thailand!

We've got three weeks of classes in the books already here at Legacy in Chiang Mai. Our third teacher (Elainea) will be arriving later this month, so things are quite busy covering everything until she gets here.

We're planning on having a Fourth of July party for the students on Sunday (the 5th—I know) if it doesn't rain. (Well, it actually rains pretty much every day this time of year—but as long as it doesn't rain all day!)

American football, a tug-of-war, water-balloon tosses, Nathan's homemade hamburgers, ice cream and fireworks are on the docket this year.

You might ask, "Why celebrate the Fourth of July in Thailand?"

My answer is simple. Why not celebrate it?

Thanks again for all your support and prayers. Legacy is off to a great start this year, and we expect smooth sailing through the rest of the year.

Oh yeah, it's not too late to consider coming over to Chiang Mai for the Feast of Tabernacles! Think about it.

Peace and love.